Dear Friends,

With the current state of the economy and the presidential election in the very near future, many are shying away from building new homes; however, the retro revolution is under way.

Any improvements you make to your home now will increase in value as the housing market begins to swing back into motion. So don't just up and move to a new place, take the opportunity to update your existing home. You will be glad you did.

In this month's newsletter we will be talking about some retro ideas for your home. Since space is limited if there is something we don't cover that you are interested in we will be glad to consult with you one-on-one regarding your unique project.

As always, we say thanks to our faithful customers and look forward to working with new friends in the future.

Remember When?

Mood rings, lava lamps, sea monkeys, stickers, and pet rocks all captured the imagination of Americans during the 1970's.

Families vacationed in station wagons and everyone wanted an RV.

The fashion influence of Sixties Hippies was mainstreamed in the Seventies. Men sported shoulder length hair and non-traditional clothing became the rage. These included bell bottom pants, hip huggers, colorful patches, hot pants, platform shoes, clogs, T-shirts, and gypsy dresses.

Knits and denims were the fabrics of choice. Leisure suits for men became commonplace, and women were fashionable in everything from ankle-length grandmother dresses to hot pants and micro-miniskirts.

The movie Annie Hall (1977) even inspired a fashion trend with women sporting traditional men's clothing such as derby hats, tweed jackets, and neckties worn with baggy pants or skirts.

So, if you are looking to get with the times and retro fit your home or office with the most current electronics let Components be your guide.

How To Retro-Fit Your Pad

Are you wanting to make your home more exciting?

Well, here are some simple ways to retro-fit your current home.

First, lets start with your family room. Lets get rid of that old tube TV and bunny ears! Replace these with a brand new HDTV with high definition cable or satellite.

To increase your in home movie viewing experience you want to be sure to include a surround sound receiver and speakers. Is it not true that half of the movie experience is the sound itself?

Another sweet option to your family room retro-fit is to include a high definition Blu-Ray DVD player. This offers you the ability to view DVD's in high definition when you utilize Blu-Ray DVD's.

Next, its never too late to update your home with whole house audio.

Get rid of that dinosaur boom box or CD player in your kitchen and treat yourself to the NuVo Essentia E6G.

Imagine cooking a meal in the kitchen while enjoying your favorite music from your iPod library.

The NuVo Essentia E6G allows you to view your iPod library and make changes to what you are listening to from an easy to use key pad conveniently located right in your kitchen.

While listening to your iPod in the kitchen your husband located in den still has the capability to utilize his own iPod music selections and never interfere with yours.

Last but not least lets not forget about securing your retro-fitted home with a security system.

Secure your home with glass break detectors, motion detectors, window and door sensors. This offers you peace of mind and security while you are away from your home.

A monitored security system will dispatch the local police to your residence to help protect your home against theft and most importantly your well-being.

Lets not forget that a wireless security system is great for any home not previously wired for a security system. This eliminates the need to run wire throughout the home.

So, when you are ready to join the retro revolution give Components a call. Let our experience help create yours.
